BSA COUNCIL HIGH ADVENTURE

The label "high adventure" has been appended to many different programs of the Boy Scouts of America. The follow criteria have been established for a program to be designated as a council high adventure program.

1. The council administers and operates the program.
2. The program may be based on a Scout reservation, but is not conducted in the traditional framework of council Scout camp. An extension of Boy Scout camp, such as an outpost camp, does not qualify.
3. Participation is limited to older Scouts, Varsity Scouts and Explorers who are at least age 13 by January 1 of the year they take part, or who have completed the seventh grade.
4. The staff is trained in the outdoor specialties offered in the program s specified in the National Standards for Council High Adventure.
5. The outdoor trek or treklike program includes action, adventure, challenge, a risk factor,* excitement, and vigorous activity. An opportunity is provided for participants to reflect on personal goals and how to apply what they have learned as a result of the high adventure experience.
6. Advance preparation and training is conducted for participants at least thirty days prior to the program.
7. The program is a high adventure experience (such as climbing) rather than a training experience (such as rock-climbing practice).
8. The program is at least five nights and six days in length.
9. The program has been conducted for at least two years.

In addition to the criteria for council high-adventure programs, some councils have more stringent requirements. These may included a higher age limit, a rank and/or merit badge requirement, a preparatory high-adventure experience (such as completion of Project COPE), or other prerequisites.

SPECIALTY ADVENTURES

The following programs do not fully meet the criteria for council high-adventure programs. In most cases, these "specialty adventures" are less than six days in length, offer training only, or have been in operation for less than two years. High-adventure crews should consider these opportunities. They offer excellent training and preparation, and they may be reclassified as council high-adventure programs in the future.
